Four Strong Pointers By Senator Taft

SENATOR TAFT, of Ohio, proposes a four-point program for the Republican party in the forthcoming campaign in an article in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post. These include: substantially full employment by the restoration of free enterprise; a rational program for social welfare; aid to foreign nations but without reducing our own standard of living; and sound money, economy, thrift and hard

* Full employment, Senator Taft writes, must be restored and maintained through ifree enterprise, with only such assistance 1 from government as is proved to be absolutely necessary. Government regulation should be by specific law and not by fiat of boards and czars. People realize how liberty can be entirely destroyed by the steady extension of bureaucratic regulation.

"A reasonable federal public-works program should be prepared and pursued, and , should certainly be ready to be carried out when business activity shows signs of declining," the senator declares, "but only those public works should be included which are going to be of value for their own sake."

Any social welfare program must make every effort to aid the lower-income groups but it must avoid the destruction of local and state responsibility, the senator holds. Any program must not place an intolerable burden on those who really bring about progress in this country. "We should go forward with an impreved plan of old-age pensions. We can extend the principles of unemployment insurance to a much more certainly be under state control and not nationalized as the National Resources Planning Board proposes.'

American financial assistance to every nation in order to bring about its own economic recovery as rapidly as possible after Allied victory is advocated. However. Taft writes, such aid should be directed to assist each nation to stand on its own feet and work out its own salvation after the peace is concluded.

The Republicans, it is asserted, are opposed to an international WPA. "The United States, with 130,000,000 people, cannot possibly play Santa Claus to the 2,000,-000,000 people in the world. It would bankrupt us in five years."

Senator Taft declares that the key to any postwar program is sound finance, and unless the government is prepared to pay its debts and balance its budgets instead of increasing the public debt, any postwar policy cannot succeed. The fallacy of unlimited public debts for either foreign or domestic purposes must be crushed before a sound plan can be projected.

"We shall come out of this war with a public debt approaching $300,000,000,000. It is not impossible to pay the interest on this debt, if we do not increase it," Senator Taft writes.

"But above all, unless we exorcise the spending theory from our political thinking, the American people will lose their souls. . . . No people can hope for progress or salvation as long as they expect, without effort, to get something for nothing.

All this makes good sense and point No. 4 is timely and refreshing inasmuch as it answers sufficiently the silly declaration by Secretary Morgenthau that economy in governmental expenditures is no substitute for higher taxes, which, of course, it is so far as it can be carried into effect.

New and Powerful Blows Are Due in the Pacific

THE NAVY is continuing its aggressive tactics in the Pacific and is steadily striking closer and harder at the Japanese-held islands constituting the outer ring of the homeland defenses, the latest blow at the time of this writing being delivered at Nauru, 350 miles west of the Gilberts with aircraft carrier and ship bombardment. It is apparent that the navy is now deriving benefit from the addition of a number of aircraft carriers, so indispensible in these operations, as the result of the steady production of this type of warship maintained over the last year or so.

There are all indications that the navy is in a position to launch some new and mighty blows in that theater of war. We can expect Adm. Nimitz to throw his amphibious forces against the strategic Marshall islands and Gen. MacArthur to start in on the enemy's southern bastion of New Britain almost any day now.

The immediate objective is clear. these two expected attacks are successful. the navy will be in a position for the first time to attack Truk, the Jap Pearl Harbor, with one prong of a pincers swinging westward from the Marshalls and the other moving north from New Britain. We shall have to take Truk before we can crush the outer defenses of the enemy.

These operations as now proceeding impress the value of adequate preparation, as the navy has waited two years until it attained the necessary surface and air superiority before attempting to storm these bases with landing parties. Valuable lessons were learned at Tarawa and these will be applied in the new offensives. Victory in this area is coming slowly but

Advent the Time Of Preparation

THIS is the time of the year which the Christian world celebrates as the time of Advent-the four weeks before Christmas in which the world waited and hoped for the Redeemer who had been promised for the salvation of all. Advent is a time for recollection and also thankfulness for the fulfillment of the promise together with the tremendous change and impetus which it gave to human progress.

Advent should be a time of preparation for Christmas and all that it signifies. If there is no preparation of the heart and mind for this event, then the sublime, spiritual significance of Bethlehem will be lost and the world will suffer an impoverishment of spirit.

In another sense, these times may be considered in their totality as another advent which precedes the era on which the future vision of all the world's peaceloving peoples have their eyes fixed with longing and hope.

The war, with its suffering and death may be what is needed to make real the ever-present desire of people everywhere for tranquillity and security, for the peace which the world can not give but which the world can make itself worthy to receive if it will learn and practice the Christian virtues of justice and charity.

The true joy of Christmas can become a lasting blessing for mankind if the traditional Advent as well as the advent typified by the war is made use of to prepare the minds and hearts of all for "peace on earth to men of good will

Aberdeen Proves Air Raid Effectiveness

CAPTURED ENEMY WEAPONS-tanks. planes, artillery, rifles, machine guns, all kinds of military equipment-are sent to the army proving grounds at Aberdeen, this state. Under analysis by expert ordnance officers, they tell their own story.

Right now that story is deterioration in quality. Not much, but some, and more noticeable in German weapons than in Japanese, which, with the exception of officers' swords, were never of the highest Ordnance officers at Aberdeen are quick to admit that the German arms makers are master craftsmen. In the light the deterioration in quality of the arms they are turning out now compared to those they formerly produced is significant. It is a tribute to the steady pounding of German industrial centers by Allied air power.

The quality of most Japanese weapons d third-rate by the Aberdeen experts. But even the slight deterioration noticed in Japanese arms is ascribed to the American war of attrition which is sinking hundreds of Japanese ships and helping to cut off the transportation of vital raw materials to Japanese factories.

Aberdeen officers agree that both German and Japanese equipment is either equalled or surpassed in every instance by American materials of war. And that is particularly gratifying in view of the fact that American industry succeeded in converting to the manufacture of war products in record, almost breath-taking, time.

Peace rumors have died down for the moment and, anyway, a peace founded on rumor would not be worth much.

Sullivan Detects Changed Attitude On Subsidy Issue

The food subsidies fight is the most boiling thing in Washington. The boiling is bringing about a change of attitude this week.

Food subsidies, in their simplest form, can be illustrated by what is done about milk. A farmer sells his milk in the usual way, to a private wholesale dis-

Mark Sellivan neighborhood. The government agent, after some ed tape, pays the farmer, a subsidy of some half a cent a pound. The subsidy is not a gift to the farmeris part payment of his cost of production. So far as the subsidy s a gift, it is a gift to the consum mer-payment of a part of the price which the consumer would otherwise have to pay. A practice similar o milk is followed as to several other forms of food.

Bill before Committee

This practice Congress is disposed to end. The House has passed a bill ending it by a more than 2 to 1 majority-literally 378 to 117. The bill is now before the Senate committee on Agriculture for hearings, and is expected to come before the full Senate for action next week. There is furious turmoil over it.

In this situation, Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, who is in effect first deputy to the president, made a radio address to the nation this week, persuasive in tone and essentially convincing. Mr. Byrnes's address contained the reasons for continuing food subsidies, and accounts for the change of attitude now taking place.

But first, why did two-thirds of the House vote against subsidies? The reasons were many - some sound, some angrily emotional. The reasons include: Belief that all subsidies are unsound in principle. Belief that this subsidy will not work, will not actually avert rise in prices and inflation. Belief that the subsidy system, once adopted, would automatically grow - larger and larger subsidies on each commodity, more and more commodities to be covered, not only farm subsidies but practically everything.

Resentments Strong

Many of the reasons were resentments: Resentment not merely against subsidies, but against the administration's whole conduct of price control and rationing, the against the administration's whole attitude toward farming-the regimenting of farmers by means of past subsidies for limiting crops, coupled with fear that the present subsidy would be used to the same end. Resentment against labor leaders as the chief demanders of food subsidies; and resentment against the Administration's greater deference to labor leaders than to other groups, as illustrated by the John L. Lewis case. A feeling that labor leaders hold a gun to the head of the Administration, saying that unless the Administration grants subsidies on food, the labor leaders will demand higher wages. A feeling that the Administration in turn, points the gun against Congress.

These are the reasons for the two-thirds vote against subsidies in the House. Not all these reasons were answered by Mr. Byrnes, But Mr. Byrnes did give a convincing why the Administration should be permitted to use subsidies in some form and degree. Mr. Byrnes stated explicitly and implicity, over and over, that if subsidies are discontinued there will be an immediate rise of some seven per cent in prices of food, and a greater rise later. He said the administration relies on subsidies in its fight against inflation-that if it is denied subsidies it cannot win the fight. This was the central theme of Mr. Byrnes' address.

Administration Must Act

This calls on Congress to permit subsidies, for reasons of principle, and expediency, On principle, Congress has given the administration

He has made some mistakes in administration, and this correspondent has not hesitated to point them out. But Mr. Wilson has just made a contribution to the thinking of our times which might well have been expected to emanate from a man far more intimately identified with public life than he has been. His comment is courageous and broad-in American history that his words

"Now we are coming into an election fear." he said, "when passions and prejudices are likely to be accentuated through the normal interplay of party politics. I submit that if we give way to those passions and prejudices, if we allow them to influence our actions, if we lend ourselves to the breaking up of the society into partisan groups and cliques, we are playing into the hands of the enemy. More than that. we are jeopardizing our entire national future.

Disastrous Gap

'Many of us in the 1930's feared that a left-wing reaction would draw labor so far away from the main body of American sentiment that the gap could not be closed without a disastrous struggle. I do not want to be an alarmist-perhaps I exaggerate since I spend so much time in Washington, where politics is always exaggerated-but I tell you frankly that I am deeply alarmed today over the possibility that a right-wing reaction may draw some sections of capital so far away from our traditions as to imperil the entire structure of American life as we know it.

"This above all is a time when the industrial leaders of America owe it to their country and to themselves to exercise temperate judgment-to practice the arts of compromise-to avoid the temptation of sacrificing enduring values for temporary gains -and to withhold encouragement from dangerous men who preach

Moved by Elections

As one who is not in the confidence of Mr. Wilson, there is nevertheless no doubt that he must be referring to the undue encourageand the opponents of democracy in America have derived from the re-Republican gains in the state and local elections. Too many Republicans of the reactionary school of thought have already made mincemeat of all the progressive legislation adopted in the last decade. Instead of going along with the idea of correcting the administrative mistakes and bureaucratic blunders of the Wagner act, the Securities and Exchange act, the Minimum Wage and Hour law and the proper enforcement of the antitrust laws to insure real competition, many of the ultra-conservatives are ready to attack the achievements of the Roosevelt-Hull foreign policy and to concentrate on a sweeping emasculation of progressive measures of domestic policy. They are already assuming that because the American people are irritated by administrative mistakes and wartime restrictions, the electorate will accept any Republican nominee for the presidency and particularly one who straddles on world issues. Mr. Wilson has given a timely bit of advice to the business men who think the 1944 election is already over and that the nation is ready to go back to ultra-conservatism-to the spokesmen who are beginning to pick flaws in the world co-operation program already acclaimed and to become preoccupied, as in the 1920's, with the illusions of another era of economic nationalism and

A Good Recipe For Success From the Pittsburgh Press

The war is no excuse for pushing customers around, says Ralph Heininger, general traffic manager for the Chicago & Southern Airlines. And then he explains with em-

"Customers made our business customers will keep us in business. There is no excuse for lack of courtesy-no, excuse for being impatient. There is no legal rationing of politeness-no curtailment of smiles. There is no official ceiling on being pleasant while on the job."

If one could walk up to some magic counter and say: "I want a prescription for success in business. he could get no better recipe than that given by this traffic manager.

Yet, thousands of employes of hundreds of establishments throughout the country are driving postwar business away just because they choose to use the war as an excuse for being rude.

While their employers rack their brains on how to keep them employed in the post-war era, they are busy kicking the underpinnings of the business into the streets.

Garrett Whiteside, at 22, came to the capitol as secretary to Rep. Ben Craven of Arkansas, March 4 1907. Senators themselves tagged him "the ninety seventh senator."

Today Whiteside, who looks like Jimmy Byrnes, makes more of being a grandfather with a namesake than he does of calling Washington bigshots by their nicknames.

Stagg's Tigers End Season Today

LOS ANGELES. Dec. 10-(A)-With only one loss—to Southern tangle in the nightcap at 5:35. Pos. record, Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg's College of the Pacific Tigers meet the March Field Fourth Air Force Fliers in the Coliseum here tome row in a game which may provide a happy climax for one of the bea collegiate football teams on the West

Despite an epidemic of colds that has spread through Army Coach Paul Schissler's hard-bitten squad, the venerable staff faces tough opposition. Although recent navy replacements have restored Pacific's punch after the loss of Halfback Johnny Podesto, the Fliers have three or four teams, including two varsity outfits, to meet the twenty-nine Tigers Stagg is bringing to town. Despite an epidemic of colds that Pacific's only defeat this season, at the hands of the Trojans, was by ▲ 6-0 score after the Tigers had suffered annulment of a touchdown because of a penalty. It has wins over Alameda Coast Guard, St. Mary's Pre-Flight, California and Del Monte Pre-Flight.

The Fliers also have lost only one game, to the University of Washington. Their conquests include St.
